

Poisoned qws

(Copyrighted. Replicated with the kind permission of Peter Hammill (<http://www.sofasound.com>).)

Horus, the son of Isis, lay in the marshes of Buto, by Set. She called out to the High God Ra to kill this evil, that her child may live yet. Casting aside her present fears she called out on the Boat of Millions of Years... Ra came and saw and stopped the sun until he had cured the life of the innocent. Horus the Good lived in the North, in lands of fertility and beauty but Set stayed in the hard desert, to him belonged all drought and perversity. While he sheds his tears beneath the Boat of Millions of Years he fights to kill the hawk, bearing with him evil and darkness. But Horus lives with the sun.

Forever the battle rages, Set tries to kill the innocent baby and only Osiris, the Lord of the Dead, can eventually save it. So we must cast aside our future fears and call out on the Boat of Millions of Years. The God of Love is on our side and with him we shall not die... there's life in the Sun! There's life in the Sun! Only in violence is the cause lost: in peace, Set can't kill our baby of love.